

A PROGRAMME OF THE JANE GOODALL INSTITUTE

The Asia-Pacific Centre for Environmental Law, Law Faculty, National University of Singapore and
the Jane Goodall Institute (Singapore) are delighted to present:

Wildlife Research, Protection, and Legislation: What Singapore can do
- A discussion with Dr Jane Goodall

Dr Jane Goodall, through her groundbreaking work on chimpanzee behaviour and social structure, revolutionised our understanding of these fascinating primates, as well as what it means to be human. Dr Goodall's humanitarian work, for which she travels 300 days a year, has been no less revolutionary. Thanks to her efforts, she has empowered millions of people to do something to help Nature, the environment, and their own communities.

The bulk of Dr Goodall's public engagements today are for general audiences. During this session, however, we will engage Dr Goodall in her capacity as a wildlife expert, research mentor, and conservationist. This will be a rare opportunity to speak to one of the world's foremost scientists and conservationists, to discuss issues closest to her heart - primate biology and conservation, wildlife research, and wildlife laws and conservation policy.

You are warmly invited to join us for the discussion with Dr Goodall.
